Dear Colleague

SAFETY AND PROTECTION OF PATIENTS, STAFF AND VOLUNTEERS IN NHSSCOTLAND

Background

The Lampard Report was commissioned by the Department of Health following investigations into matters relating to Jimmy Savile and was published in February 2015. The report considered emerging themes to identify risks and lessons learnt offering recommendations for the NHS in England and Wales, The Department of Health and wider Government.

In continuing to meet its commitment to ensuring patient safety and the safety of the staff and volunteers who work within and for the NHS in Scotland, the Scottish Government has chosen to give careful consideration to the Lampard Report recommendations and how these may be applied in NHSScotland. More detailed information is provided at Annex 1 and 2.

Actions for Boards

1. Boards are asked to consider each of the Lampard Report Recommendations, identifying any necessary local actions and to ensure that arrangements for the monitoring, measurement and reporting of the impact of these actions are considered through their Board level governance processes.

2. Boards should also consider the themes identified in the Lampard Report. These are implied in relation to some of the culture and process issues raised in view of their impact on individual behaviour in the workplace. They include how individuals' perception, trust and power relate to organisational effectiveness/safety and public protection through encouraging openness and accountability. Boards should ensure that any necessary action is identified and fed into local improvement plans.

1. Background

Following investigations into the abuse of individuals by Jimmy Savile on NHS premises, The Secretary of State for Health appointed former barrister Kate Lampard to consider NHS guidelines and procedures governing involvement of volunteers in the NHS and advise the Secretary of State for Health on whether and how any such guidelines or procedures needed to be tightened or changed.

The subsequent Lampard Report published in February 2015 identified themes and lessons learned providing 14 recommendations for the NHS in England and Wales, The Department of Health and wider Government. These recommendations focussed on:

- Celebrities, VIPs and other official visitors
- Voluntary services arrangements including recruitment and selection, training and development, supervision and support
- Voluntary Service Managers’ Support and opportunity to share good practice
- Safeguarding arrangements, training, resources and structures
- Vetting information checks and referrals for employees and agency/contract staff where applicable
- Assessment of risks to brand and reputation relating to associations with celebrities and major donors
- Patient and visitor social media access arrangements and process.

Although the Lampard report was aimed at NHS England, we chose to take stock of the report and reviewed NHSScotland arrangements thoroughly.

2. Summary of Progress

Scottish Government Policy Leads reviewed the current policy position in view of the recommendations, taking into account the differences between NHS England and NHSScotland.

This work has informed our position that good progress has been made in recent years in developing robust procedures and practices at a national level and we are pleased to see that arrangements to fulfil many of the recommendations are already in place.

These include:

- Good practice and protocols for managing visitors being shared through NHSScotland Communication Leads to enable Boards to develop appropriate local arrangements.
- NHSScotland PIN Policies covering: employment checks for individuals engaged in unpaid work and placements, bullying and harassment of staff by visitors, mechanisms for staff to raise concerns about child protection. The annual PIN compliance exercise has informed Scottish Government that Boards have implemented these PINs and meet the required standards.
• The Clear Pathway project led by VHS (The national network for Scotland’s voluntary health organisations). This is a new collaborative project which aims to support safe, effective and person centred volunteering in NHS settings, with the focus on volunteers recruited and managed by third sector organisations.

• The Scottish Health Council work with NHSScotland Boards and the National Group for Volunteering in NHSScotland to identify and assess potential risks at Board level. The findings have been communicated to Strategic Leads for Volunteering and Voluntary Services Managers.

• The National Guidance for Child Protection in Scotland (2014) and the Child Protection Guidance for Health Professionals (2013) (the Pink Book) which contain instructions for the provision of child protection within Health Boards.

• Healthcare Improvement Scotland’s new quality of care reviews will assess and provide public assurance regarding the quality and safety of NHS services across Scotland and will take cognisance of the Lampard recommendations where appropriate.

As a result we are content that Scottish Government is able to demonstrate our commitment to ensuring that necessary policy safeguards are in place. We will continue to review our procedures and practices through our existing mechanisms and working arrangements.

3. Next Steps

The Strategic/Policy Leads in Scottish Government/HIS will continue to work with NHSScotland Boards to help them to maintain the necessary safeguards as demonstrated in Annex 2, and we encourage all Health Boards to review local practice in light of the Lampard recommendations and take forward the relevant actions where they have been identified within the attached table.

Boards should be aware of the Scottish Child Abuse Inquiry and the Independent Enquiry into Child Abuse in England and Wales. Scottish Government will continue to provide updates on any subsequent recommendations to further ensure the safety and protection of patients, staff and volunteers and will continue to support Boards to ensure that identified actions are implemented nationally and locally as appropriate.

Boards should also be aware of the Child Protection Improvement Programme, in particular the report and recommendations of the independently chaired Systems Review Group, ‘Protecting Scotland’s Children and Young People: It is Still Everyone’s Job’, accepted in full by the Minister for Childcare and Early Years on 2 March 2017. The Review identified that leadership is a critical factor in creating a system with effective processes and culture to ensure children and young people are protected from harm. As such, the Scottish Government will establish a National Child Protection Leadership Group with senior leadership representation from the organisations which have responsibilities for scrutiny and delivery of child protection, to assist the whole sector by providing national strategic oversight and mechanisms for improvement across Scotland. The Leadership Group will identify work needed to support Chief Officers to strengthen delivery of their responsibilities and there will be regional leadership events for Chief Officers Groups and Child Protection Committees.
